MUMBAI: Power utility Tata Power NSE - 0.86 % has worked out an extensive set of measures to ensure that its workforce at different plant locations get a secure and hygienic work environment amid the spread of the Corona virus outbreak.

"We have a dedicated workforce that is working tirelessly to provide seamless power supply to all vital institutions and millions of Indians quarantined at home," said Praveer Sinha, MD & CEO, Tata Power. "The company is taking adequate measures to mitigate the risk of exposure for their employees," he added.

"Our 70 renewable power plants, 11 thermal & hydro generation plants including CGPL's Mundra UMPP along with transmission and distribution network operation in five cities are running at full capacity to serve millions of customers across the country," he said.

Some of these measures introduced by the company to take care of its workforce include implementing rotational shifts creating two independent groups for operations and on ground workforce, who in turn are quarantined from each other. The corporate employees continue to support the smooth functioning of daily operations from their homes. Additionally, the company's senior management team follows 50% rotation of work from home and office to support their operations and field team who are working 24/7.

"The utility's brave 10,000 workforce continue to work diligently with full responsibility at different plant locations, including 2000 officers and 8000 contract workforce," said Sinha.

The health of all the power engineers and staff is being regularly examined and maintained, through a strict social distancing protocol along with taking care of their travel, stay, food, etc. so that they can take care of their responsibilities and are confident of their health and well-being.
